Preface

Please read this first before using the citator.

What is a citator?

A citator is a research tool that identifies subsequent citations of judicial opinions. It identifies what later opinions have cited to a particular decision. This information can be useful to find additional relevant opinions on specific research topics. It is also useful to identify when a decision's holding has been subsequently overruled or modified by later case law.

How comprehensive is the citator?

The quality control process has uncovered that this citator is missing approximately 8.3% of all subsequent case citations. These missing citations should all be from opinions reported in 1 ROP through 16 ROP, meaning that they are all more than 15 years old. Additional information about the missing citations may be found in the methodology explanation in the Appendix.

I plan to have the citation shortfall eliminated by the 2026 update to the citator. Until then, hopefully you will agree that a citator that is approximately 92% comprehensive is better than no citator at all.

How to use the citator?

To use the citator, look up the judicial opinion that you care about. For example, let's say that you intend to rely on the decision of Rechelulk v. Tmilchol, 2 ROP Intrm. 277 (1991) in a brief that you are submitting to a court. Before submitting the brief, look that case up in the 2 ROP Intrm. section of this citator and you will see that twelve subsequent decisions are listed beneath it (this information is on page 33 of this citator). These twelve decisions listed below Rechelulk on page 30 have all cited Rechelulk for one thing or another. If you want to find cases on similar topics as Rechelulk, you could look through those twelve opinions to see if they are similarly on point. At a minimum, you should look at the most recent decisions that have cited Rechelulk to confirm that Rechelulk has not been overruled or otherwise modified.

For those who practice law in Palauan courts, I recommend that you make it part of your routine to use this citator to look up every judicial opinion that you intend to cite in your briefs. This will help ensure that the opinions you rely on remain "good law." Additionally, it may help you to locate other relevant cases.

Does this citator distinguish between positive and negative treatment?

No. This citator does not indicate why a case cited an earlier case. The citation could be associated with negative treatment (like overruling the previous case), or it could be associated with positive treatment (like agreeing with the previous case). The citator only identifies that a citation occurred. The citation itself is not positive or negative.

Does this citator identify the level of court or type of opinion?

This citator indicates the court that issued each opinion in the parenthetical at the end of each citation. No court abbreviation in the parenthetical indicates that it is an opinion of the Appellate Division. Opinions of the Trial Division, Land Court, Court of Common Pleas, Disciplinary Tribunal, and Judicial Disciplinary Tribunal are specifically indicated as such. However, this citator does not indicate whether a citation appears in a majority opinion, concurring opinion, or dissenting opinion.

How was this citator created and funded?

The citator was created using the opinions publicly available on the “Cases & Judgments” page of the Supreme Court’s website (www.palausupremecourt.net). It was assembled without the use of artificial intelligence. The methodology of how the citator was created is further explained in the Appendix. The initial creation of the original version of the citator was funded by a research grant by the University of North Carolina School of Law. This citator is intended to be distributed free of charge to all who wish to use it.

How often will this citator be updated?

I plan to update the citator at the beginning of each calendar year. Smaller updates may occur more frequently to patch errors and omissions. The version and currency of the citator will always appear on the title page and the top of each page.

What should you do if you spot an error or an omission?

Please let me know! Email me at bennardo@unc.edu to report any errors, questions, concerns, or suggestions.

Appendix

This appendix is designed to explain the methodology used to create the citator and the estimated 8.29% shortfall in its coverage.

The citator was created entirely using documents that are publicly available on the “Cases & Judgments” page of the Supreme Court’s website (www.palausupremecourt.net).

Using the full-text search tool on the “Decision Search Page,” I first searched each of the citations to the over 1650 published Palauan decisions starting with “1 ROP Intrm 1” through “2025 Palau 6” using quotations marks. For each search, I sorted the results by date and cut and paste the results into an Excel spreadsheet.

In addition to searching each properly formatted citation, I also attempted to locate mis-cited cases. For example, I searched “9 ROP Intrm”, “10 ROP Intrm”, and so on to find citations that inadvertently included “Intrm” in the citation even after it was removed from the name of the reporter. I also searched for variations such as “ROP Interm” and “Interim”. In order to find citations to slip opinions, I search several variations (“Civ App”, “Crim App”, “Civil App”, “Criminal App”, “slip op”, “slip opinion”).

To serve as quality control, I had my research assistant* create a Table of Authorities for 5% of opinions. To do this, I selected every 20th published opinion. This produced a quality-control set of 82 opinions. For each of these 82 opinions, my research assistant downloaded the opinion and searched for citations within it by searching for “ROP”, “ROP Intrm”, and “Palau”. She then listed the citations that appeared within each opinion. The 82 opinions in the quality-control set included citations to 378 Palauan opinions.

When I cross-referenced the 378 citations from the quality-control set against the citator, I found that the citator was missing 67 of them (17.72%). When I investigated further, I discovered that the missing citations occurred because the full-text search tool on the Decision Search Page does not retrieve quoted search terms that break across more than one line of text.

I patched the 67 missing citations that the quality-control spot-checking process uncovered as missing. I have since manually individually searched each of the opinions from 17 ROP 1 through 2025 Palau 6 for “broken” (and therefore missing)

* Katie Southwick (UNC School of Law Class of 2026).

citations. Through that process, I uncovered 676 such missing citations and have added them to the citator.

At this point, the updated version 1.1 of the citator should contain every citation in every opinion from 17 ROP 1 through 2025 Palau 6. The remaining broken and missing citations should only be from 1 ROP through 16 ROP, meaning that they are all more than 15 years old. Conservatively, I estimate that, at most, 16.67% of the citations from 1 ROP through 16 ROP are broken. I already patched 5% of these as part of the quality control work, meaning that 15.83% of the citations in those opinions are potentially missing. That works out to about 627 missing citations, which, extrapolating from the citations in the quality control set, would be about 8.29% of all citations from all of the reporters. That number is likely a bit on the high side, but I feel it is better to overestimate the shortfall than to underestimate it.

The update in coverage in version 1.1 is a significant upgrade from version 1.0, but the work is still ongoing. I plan to get the remaining missing citations patched by the release of version 2.0 at the end of the calendar year.

 Along with patching those 676 citations, I also added well over 100 more citations to slip opinions and other smaller patches. I would estimate that version 1.1 of the citator contains well over 800 more citations than version 1.0.
